Bachelor of Vocation (Gemmology) (3 year Graduation Programme)

INDIA is one of the world's largest diamonds and gem polishing and jewellery manufacturing centers and is also in the business of export of precious stones, gems and jewellery, which accounts for the largest portion of India's global trade. The gems and jewellery industry, in 2013, created Rs. 2,51,000 crore (US$40 billion) worth in economic output on value added basis. It is a growing sector of Indian economy and is projected to grow to about Rs. 5,00,000 crore (US$79 billion) by 2018.

The gems and jewellery industry has been an ancient art and continuous economic activity in India, traced over several thousand years. Till 18th century, India was the world's only known major reliable source of diamond mining and its processing. Now, Indian cities such as Surat and Mumbai are the hubs of world's jewellery polishing, cutting, precision finishing, supply and trade. Unlike other centers, the gems and jewellery activity in India is primarily artisans driven and is manual. Indian gem and jewellery economy's particular strength is in precision cutting, polishing and processing small diamonds (below one carat). Yet, India is also a hub for processing of larger diamonds, pearls and other precious stones. About 11 out of 12 diamonds set in any jewellery in the world are cut and polished in India.

GEMMOLOGY is the science dealing with natural, artificial and synthetic gems and gemstones. It is considered as a field of geoscience and a branch of mineralogy. Some jewelers are academically trained gemmologists and are qualified to identify and evaluate gems. Our Gemmology B.Voc. Programme is ideal for those keen to get the best start in their gemstone education. It is designed to support students with a step-by-step approach, with plenty of guidance and practical sessions.

In this step-wise programme, the students would be learning about handling commercially important gems, such as diamond, sapphire, ruby and emerald etc., as well as organics and a range of treated and imitation gem materials and their identification. The course covers the origins of crystals and gems, their fashioning and use in jewellery, the factors influencing their value and their durability and usage of gemological tools.

This programme is focused for those wishing to pursue their passion in gemstones. Whether you want to further your career or learn about gemstones as a hobby, this course is designed for a variety of personals. As a career, one can start working in a local gemological firm, a jewelery shop; at an advanced level, one can start his/ her own business as an entrepreneur or a graduate degree would eventually entitles the students to a global venture, whether as a professional or as a multinational entrepreneur.
