LU final yr students to take exams, date to be finalised

LUCKNOW: In view of the pandemic, the Lucknow University has decided to promote first and second year students without examinations. The decision was taken during a meeting of the examination committee chaired by vice chancellor Alok Kumar Rai on Thursday. The decision is in line with the suggestion made by the state government regarding university exams a few days ago. However, the varsity will hold exam for final year students of both bachelor's and master's courses. The date has not been finalized as yet.

"The meeting was held to discuss the possibility of adopting the suggestion made by the state government to promote students without exams. The decision was approved and the examination committee will finalise the details of the order," said LU spokesman Durgesh Srivastav.

While first and second year students of bachelor course and first year students in master's course can be promoted without exam, LU will hold exam for final year students of both bachelor's and master's course.

The exam, as per state government suggestions, will be of shorter duration. The date of the examination is yet to be decided.

Reportedly, the exam will be on single paper comprising questions from all subjects taken by the students. The duration will be 90 minutes and format in multiple choice or OMR.

"The decision about exam date and its format could not be taken during meeting on Thursday. The exam committee will discuss these issues with other staff members before a decision is taken," said Srivastav. HTC
