He is also a creative writer who is known for his articles and poems, published in leading journals.

About the webinar

The current professional environment posits the need for a leadership which is linked to creativity and innovation. To become a leader, one needs to draw on the right minds, manage creativity as well as come up with innovative ideas. This webinar is an attempt to encourage students to pursue the art of creative leadership, by engaging with their creative selves. The speakers are reputed professionals in their respective fields of administration and teaching, who are also creative writers. The webinar focuses on their experiences to understand ideas about divergent, non-conformist thinking required for excellence. This webinar also aims to encourage students to think outside the box, in order to shape them to be future leaders.
