hip in Latin America, died on Tuesday. He was 89. President Yami Akyea announced the death, but didn't say where he died or how. Mulica said he had esophageal cancer in Apr 2024. "President, comrade mentor, leader. We'll miss you," Orsi wrote. Known as Pepe, Mulica was elected president in 2009 at age 74 as a generation of leftist Latin American govts were losing their populishure. Though he had a reputation as a savvy leader of Uruguay's brushment. A self-described philosophical anarchist, he was known for brash charisma, skepticism of capitalism's excesses, modest way of life and intent to inject purpose and humility into gov when Uruguay's left was ascendant. Although his ambitions were bigger than his ability to deliver on policy promises, the progressive legislation his administration did pass earned global praise and paved the way for a leftist ally to succeed him. wri
